Cohiba

Cohiba, created in 1966, is the most prestigious of the Cuban brands of cigars, the only one whose leaves undergo triple fermentation. When a bodyguard of Fidel Castro shared some of his private supply of cigars made by a local artisan named Eduardo Ribera, they pleased Castro so much that a special production was made for himself and other top government officials. For many years it remained for diplomatic use only. Today the brand includes 4 distinct lines: Classica, 1492, Maduro 5 and Behike as well as many Limited Editions and Reservas, often called the "selection of the selection". The name cohíba derives from the Taíno word for tobacco.

Montecristo

Montecristos were created in 1935, when Alonso Menéndez purchased the Particulares Factory. The name for the brand was inspired by the Alexandre Dumas novel The Count of Monte Cristo, which was supposedly a very popular choice among the torcedores (cigar rollers) in their factory to have read by the lector on the rolling floor. In the early days, they were sold exclusively at Dunhill shops in New York and London. Nowadays, Montecristos range from medium to full strength and cover the entire spectrum of sizes. The recently created Open series is made in smaller numbers, receives great care and uses high quality wrappers, creating a very good looking cigar.

Partagás

Created by Don Jaime Partagás from Catalonia in 1845, the brand is one of the oldest and most prestigious Habanos. Don Jaime is also believed to have experimented with various methods of fermenting and aging tobacco and is legendarily credited with hiring the one of the first lectors to read to and entertain the cigar rollers as they worked. The Partagás blend has a consistently deep, rich, earthy flavour, and a strong aroma. The brand is often the choice of experienced smokers and its characteristics make it a perfect after dinner cigar. The series D n°4, a Robusto, is today the brand's most popular cigar.

Romeo y Julieta

Made famous by cigar devotee Sir Winston Churchill, the brand was founded in 1875 by Inocencio Alvarez and Manin Garcia and is a benchmark for the medium flavour Habano cigar. Romeo y Julieta offers the widest range of cigars of any Cuban brand and vitolas such as the Churchill, 7"/47 gauge have been adopted by many other tobacco companies. Romeo's blend is well balanced and aromatic and has been consistent over the years. In the large cigar range strength can vary from light to medium Cedros and medium to full Belicosos. Before the first world war, Romeos were produced with personalised bands for more than 2000 wealthy customers.

Named in memory of Simon Bolivar, the brand was created in 1902 and from the outset became the benchmark for strong, full flavoured Habanos. Bolivar cigars are rolled using oily wrappers which deliver deep flavours with a rich aroma. Bolivars are usually not the first brand choice for cigar novices, so we have included the El Greco special blend for our most experienced smokers, a cigar produced in honour of the great painter Dominico Theotokopoulos from Crete.

Hoyo de Monterrey

Situated in San Juan y Martinez, the brand was created by Spanish emigrant José Gener in 1865. Literally translated from Spanish to English as "the Hole of Monterrey" in reference to the concave terrain favoured by growers of premium tobacco, near a river in the bottom of a valley, Hoyo's wrappers are said to be some of the best in the world. The brand's blend is renowned for its light flavour but intense aroma and some of the brand cigars are classic Habanos.

Ramón Allones

Ramon Allones is one of the oldest brands of Habanos still in production, created by brothers Ramón and Antonio Allones in 1845 and is famed as the first cigar brand to have utilized colorful lithographs for box art, the first to utilize bands on cigars, and the first to package cigars in the "8-9-8" style. The brand blend is characterised by intense and complex flavour, dark wrappers and rich aroma. Ramon Allones are made at the La Corona factory alongside Bolivar and Partagas. The brand's blend has turned milder in recent years, yet losing none of its great flavours.

H.Upmann

Created by German banker Herman Upmann in 1844, the brand is known as a fine example of an elegant light to medium Habano. The brand today comprises a wide range of cigars in a blend praised for quality leaves, from tobacco grown in Cuba's premium region, Vuelta Abajo. Upmann has been the winner of several Gold Medals throughout the years and in the 1930s introduced the metallic cigar tube. The favourite cigar of US President John F. Kennedy was the now-discontinued, machine-made H. Upmann Petit Upmann (sold under the name Demi Tasse in the United States). The night before the Cuban embargo was signed, he had aide Pierre Salinger procure every box he could gather from Washington, DC tobacconists, totalling 1,200 cigars.
